Burning of a Theatre. The Opera Comique, Paris, took fire last evening, and the whole building was destroyed. Fourteen persons who jumped from the windows were killed, and fortythree injured. It is probable that many were crushed to death in the galleries. Five bodies terribly burned were conveyed to the national library. Among them was the body of a woman clasping a little boy in her Nineteen persons are known to be Many of these were supers. An artificial fire apparatus which had been placed in position in readiness for the burning of the palace in the second act, rolled down from its place near the roof and exploded below. Women half clad and carrying their costumes fled from the stage screaming. Supers and members of the chorus were terrified. Some of the latter fled with nothing on but tights. The flames spread with such rapidity that in fifteen minutes the stage was a vast furnace, and several actors escaped by climbing to the roof of the side of the Rue Marivanta, where they were rescued by fire escapes. M. Tasquin im-plored the audience to remain seated until the exits were opened, which they did. If they had made a rush for the doors the loss of life would have been terrible. The police outside were unable to restrain the crowd, who besieged the building inquiring for friends inside, until a military cordon was formed. One until a military cordon was formed. One man, who wanted to rescue his brother and sister, raved and tore his hair and menaced with a stick the people who stopped him from rushing into the blazing building. The scene outside was one of the wilderst excitement. Falling embers struck horses in the surrounding streets, causing them to plunge and rear. Flames shot out of every window, forcing the crowd into the narrow streets, where the crush was terrific. There were 150 persons on the terrific. There were 150 persons on the stage when the fire broke out. The killed include four firemen. There was not a frantic rush in the theatre, but it is believed frantic rush in the theatre, but it is believed that the staircase became blocked. The fire broke out during the first act of the open, "Mignon." One of the wings caught from a gas jet, and the entire stage was immediately enveloped in flames. The fire soon spread to the whole house. The roof soon fell in, sending showers of sparks as far as the Place de la Bourse. With the exception of Madame Sellier, who perished in the flames, all the actors escaped, though several of the supernumeries were injured.

FLOORING, DOORS, SASH, BLINDS, FRAMES, Several of the supernumeries were injured severely. The iron curtain was lowered in front of the stage, and this prevented the fire from spreading immediately to the auditorium, and allowed the audience time to es cape. The men who carried away the money cape. The men who carried away the money chest report that when they left the auditorium was quite empty. The fire brigade distinguished themselves, and many of them had narrow escapes. Most of the casualties so far reported were due to nervousness. Many persons who were unable to trust themselves to walk the narrow ledge of the cornice round the building jumped off in their terror. One woman coolly walked all round the cornice, while the flames were bursting above, until she reached a fire escape. The victims were almost all singers. The streets in the vicinity of the burned theatre were crowded until an early hour this morning. The total number of persons known to have been killed and injured is sixty-seven. The building was entirely destroyed, and it is as yet impossible to say how many bodies are buried beneath the ruins. Only a fortnight ago M. Steenackers called attention in the chamber of deputies to the dangerous condition of the Opera Comique, which was the oldest theatre in Paris. The Figure also called attention to the same thing after the recent twelve-hour benefit performance. Mrs. Mary Edminson and her little daughter went fishing near Somerville, Ala., the other day. Mrs. Edminson kneeled by the creek, and bent down to drink from the running water, when a large water mocca-
